Perception

Perception. A handicapping software that allows you to tailor a new kind of neural network to your needs. The primary advantage of Perception is that you can decide which factors you want the software to examine. This has tremendous potential.

The dialog box graphic provided shows 16 different pieces of data the neural network will use in the handicapping process. You can take out as many as you want. For example, if you don’t want early pace used in the training and subsequent analysis, just click on the ‘Early Pace’ box and the program won’t use it.

It’s easy and convenient because there are several different networks that all look at different sets of factors, you can with ease. Creating several networks will allow you to pin point the data that indicates successful horses.

You can also create networks that function in unison. In other words, you can have a network that looks primarily at class and a different network that looks at early speed. Still a third network could be set up to look at speed ratings and win percentages.

Perception is completely different kind of neural network. To visualize how this network functions, consider data such as times, beaten lengths, and class to be individual pieces of information. Each one of those pieces of information is an input to Perception. Each piece is assigned a “weight” based on how it affects the outcome of a race.

The importance of this scheme is that inputs to Perception can be “disconnected” so that the output or decision of the perception neural network could be based on only part of the total race data. The edge is that, as a handicapper, you can choose a network that will work just as hard to learn why horses finished as they did with only 3 factors and it would if it had used all 16 pieces of information.

Consider the ability to use a particular group of factors for 3 years old at 1 mile and a completely different set for 4 year olds at 1 mile. Maybe your track favors early speed. Perhaps class is the dominant factor at your track for stakes races. This neural network, not only allows you to pick the factors you want to use, it helps you make the decision. The possibilities are endless. Order your copy today.

NEW FROM PHILLIPS

METHOD = 23 PTS

Every few months Phillips Newsletter writes a new thoroughbred method always striving for more accuracy and quickness of use. In the examples above, you see part of our latest Block Four Method. We show the unaddicted point total for the basic part. You adjust this for class, odds, recency and track class to get a final figure, usually in 1 minute or less per horse.

Each method is a bit better than our last and we have a two-fold objective: (1) to get new subscribers to try our monthly newsletter, and (2) to give handicapping help to our thousands of regular subscribers.

The entire method is always included in the current PRN edition which also reviews and rates all new t'bird, harness and greyhound methods, computer or regular. Books, too. We've done this over for over 15 years.

In the Sept. issue we have our latest method, Block Four, above, based on the last 4 PP lines of each horse. Results for Block Four are almost unbelievable. We may not try to write anything for some time as this has everything we've been seeking. Potential new subscribers can get BF through the following special offer.

1. You get 7 issues of PRN for the usual cost of 6 (it costs $6 an issue).
2. You get our 60 page Master Index which lists and rates everything reviewed the last 15 years (a regular $6 value).
3. Total value is $47 and our special price is just $35 including the Block Four Method.

To get you want to start with the Sept. issue. Send check or money order (U.S. funds please) and we fill all orders by First Class return mail. Send to:

METHOD = 12 PTS

Every few months Phillips Newsletter writes a new thoroughbred method always striving for more accuracy and quickness of use. In the examples above, you see part of our latest Block Four Method. We show the unaddicted point total for the basic part. You adjust this for class, odds, recency and track class to get a final figure, usually in 1 minute or less per horse.

Each method is a bit better than our last and we have a two-fold objective: (1) to get new subscribers to try our monthly newsletter, and (2) to give handicapping help to our thousands of regular subscribers.

The entire method is always included in the current PRN edition which also reviews and rates all new t'bird, harness and greyhound methods, computer or regular. Books, too. We've done this over for over 15 years.

In the Sept. issue we have our latest method, Block Four, above, based on the last 4 PP lines of each horse. Results for Block Four are almost unbelievable. We may not try to write anything for some time as this has everything we've been seeking. Potential new subscribers can get BF through the following special offer.

1. You get 7 issues of PRN for the usual cost of 6 (it costs $6 an issue).
2. You get our 60 page Master Index which lists and rates everything reviewed the last 15 years (a regular $6 value).
3. Total value is $47 and our special price is just $35 including the Block Four Method.

To get you want to start with the Sept. issue. Send check or money order (U.S. funds please) and we fill all orders by First Class return mail. Send to:
