CLOSER LOOK There's something to be said for the horses that really blossom up here every year and Cross Border appears to be one of those; he is 6 for 7 over Saratoga turf in his career, including a strong win over a couple of these same rivals in the Bowling Green last time; has never won over this distance but he has run well enough over it to consider it a non-factor; tactical runner is a big threat right back.

CLOSER LOOK Preakness runnerup remains wireless dating back to the Lecomte in his 3yo debut in mid-January, but he has held his own with the top horses in this division along the way; was probably beaten when clipping heels and nearly going down in midstretch of the Haskell, but that was another good effort from this consistent colt; has proven to be a notch below the best but he is tactical and may still have some improvement in him yet.

CLOSER LOOK The leader of this 3yo division right now prepped over the track in the Jim Dandy and was a more convincing winner than it may appear while carrying all the ground and still finding enough to turn away a perfectly-ridden Keepmeinmind; lone loss came in the Derby over this distance but he had an excuse there when getting bumped at the start and winding up wide; Belmont win two back is the defining race for this crop right now and he is way the horse to beat in the Travers.

CLOSER LOOK Lightly-raced colt appears to be coming to hand at the right time for Pletcher; lost to the wrong kind of horse in the Wood but he was certainly best that day when trips are taken into account, and his form leaping up to that race was much better than it looks; forget his Derby where he was bumped early and then wound up wide around the track; got some time off and looked like a much-improved version of the horse we saw in the spring when dominating the Curlin last time; dangerous.

CLOSER LOOK Went into that Curlin right off of his maiden win and acquitted himself quite well while only second-best to Dynamic One; connections are asking a lot of this colt by coming right back in a much tougher Travers but the ability is there and his upside is readily apparent; needs to progress immensely from that last one but he is one to watch no matter what happens on Saturday.

CLOSER LOOK Well-bred Curlin colt was underrated as a 2yo with several trips working against him in major spots; 3yo debut in the Lexington made him a horse to watch, but he was unfortunately forced to scratch from the Derby due to a foot bruise; started back in the Ohio Derby, where he was shuffled back on the turn before rallying gamely too late; had to spend time in quarantine earlier in the meet and missed another scheduled race, so prepped on the turf last time, where he got a wide trip and tired late; still has plenty to prove but might be sufficiently dirtied up to take a shot with.
