CLOSER LOOK: Was the dominant filly at Oaklawn this winter while posting three victories by a combined 23 lengths, including the Martha Washington and Honeybee; passed on the final race in that series to take on colts in the Arkansas Derby, where she failed to work out a clean trip and settled for third as the favorite; back in with fillies for Hall of Fame trainer Lukas, who has won the Oaks four times previously; she owns excellent tactical speed and can land a trip breaking from the rail as top rider Saez takes over for the first time; has yet to win beyond 8.5 furlongs but the distance of this race is unlikely to be a problem and she already handled the Churchill surface when blowing away maidens early on; plenty to like an might be a fair price.

Godolphin homebred by Medaglia d'Oro went long first time out as a 2yo, where she closed strongly to win going away with a figure that came back way too low to be taken seriously; bit off more than she could chew when starting in the Grade 2 Demoiselle in her second start but actually ran pretty well in that spot while checking in fourth after coming widest from last off the turn; has won two in a row back on dirt this year and became a graded stakes winner when shooting through on the rail to take the Gazelle over this distance last month; she has had perfect trips in both recent wins, but her tactical style could lead to another good one here as she breaks toward the inside; getting better with every start and the distance is no issue for her.

Earned a big figure for a debuting 2yo filly in the summer when crushing maidens over a short sprint distance, then handled a difficult stretch out while stepping right up to win the Pocahontas just as easily in her second start; had some backers when taking on Echo Zulu at the Breeders' Cup but stumbled at the start to lose her best chance; she returned from the layoff with a solid try in the Rachel Alexandra while taking over on a good pace before failing to last and finishing behind both Turnerloose and Goddess of Fire, but took a step forward last time when just missing to the returning Echo Zulu; had her chance to defeat the champ in that last one and things are only going to get tougher vs. this field.

NY-bred filly put a strong finishing kick on display en route to winning the first two starts of her career, the second of those over a mile while appearing to relish a wet track; stepped up to try the Demoiselle in her final start as a 2yo and came up just short of Nest at the end, though the final margin might be a bit deceptive considering the trip the winner pulled that day; broke through to a big new Beyer top when smashing a weak field in her 3yo debut, then stepped back up and stretched back out in the Gazelle last month, where she went favored and ultimately was no match for Nostalgic in the late stages despite having an easy time controlling a rated pace; has to do better while facing a very strong field but is far from impossible.

Ran in all of the big races for 2yo fillies in California after breaking her maiden going a mile last summer and was not a real factor in any of them, including the Breeders' Cup where she got dusted by Echo Zulu; did have a wide trip before finishing evenly when trying the Starlet at the end of the year in an effort that might be a bit better than it looks; poses perhaps the most interesting dilemma among the longshots, as she exits a career-best effort when pulling off an upset in the Santa Anita Oaks after a dream trip; she certainly took advantage of softened up leaders that day, but she still improved while running down Adare Manor, who was one of the favorites for this race at the time; some things to like at a price.

Undeclared filly has made it look easy so far while going 4 for 4 and she proved that she can handle a two-turn route making her final prep in the Gulfstream Park Oaks; she obviously has talent and might catch a setup in this Oaks that flatters her late-running style, though it must be pointed out that she faced a terrible field at Gulfstream last time - big figure or not; has to be taken seriously but this is the toughest field she has faced to date by a wide margin and she is going to take her share of the money; won't be surprised if she winds up being this good but can argue both sides and would be wary of taking too short of a price at post time.

Lightly-raced Uncle Mo filly has only a maiden win to her credit after four starts and has yet to Beyer out of the 70s; she is twice graded stakes-placed and just finished second to Nest in the Grae 1 Ashland, though she was far behind at the end and never threatened in that race; the lone career victory came going seven furlongs over this track, where she finished strongly into a fast pace to win clear; is not untalented but this is a big ask and she is going to have to improve by a lot if she is going to factor vs. this group.

Candy Ride filly has won twice on dirt in her career, but her signature win to this point came when switched to synthetic for the Bourbonette Oaks last month; made a big move to win that race impressively with a new Beyer top, and did so after failing to make any kind of impact at nearly 100:1 in the Rachel Alexandra vs. three of these same rivals in her prior start; she did run an underrated race with some trouble in the Silverbulletday back in January but still only earned a Beyer of 69 for that effort; likely to be one of the longest shots on the board despite exiting a career-best effort, and is going to have some pace in front of her here.

The third undefeated runner in this Oaks field, this filly is more of a wildcard as she makes her stateside debut following four dominant victories in Dubai over the winter, two of those vs. colts; she left no doubt in any of those four wins while finishing her races off with a flourish whether sprinting or routing; she did have a tendency to break slowly over there - something she cannot afford on Friday - and she also showed some greenness for the first time in the UAE Oaks when climbing through kickback in the early stages after winding up last; she overcame all of it with natural ability and is perhaps the most interesting filly in this stacked Oaks field, win or lose.

A stakes winner on turf as a 2yo, she ran an excellent race on that surface in last year's Grade 2 Jessamine while cutting a fast pace and just getting caught late by a couple of closers; she was brought back from the layoff on dirt and handled the switch without issue en route to a game victory in the Grade 2 Rachel Alexandra over Goddess of Fire and Hidden Connection; kept close to Echo Zulu's pace last time and did her best trying to challenge that filly around the turn, but proved to be no match and faded to fourth in the stretch; showed that she can rate and finish on this surface and is going to be a price in this race, though she is going to have to improve again in order to factor at the end.

Lightly-raced Gun Runner filly showed improved speed when stretched out for the first time at Oaklawn, and wound up winning that MSW route easily despite drifting a bit in the late stages; stepped up to try the Grade 3 Fantasy last time and improved again while just missing to front-running Yuugiri after bidding strongly up the rail in the stretch; she needs a scratch to get in and then has to take a significant step forward if she gets one. -Mike Beer
